

Coping with the loss of a co-worker

People who work together are connected by being part of the same organisation — and many colleagues become friends. When a co-worker passes away, it's normal for people in the workplace to be affected — whether or not they were close to the person. Some may experience shock or grief.

These emotional reactions are natural. They may be felt immediately or can appear hours, days, weeks or months later. Usually these feelings will ease over time. It's equally normal to experience no reaction at all. Sometimes the loss can feel so painful that it interferes with someone's ability to work or function at home.

Common reactions to grief

The loss of a co-worker may produce a wide range of symptoms that may feel unusual to you. Remember that these are normal reactions, and while they are different for each person, they may affect:

How you think

- Poor concentration
- Shorter attention span
- Slowed problem solving
- Memory problems
- Difficulty making decisions

How you feel physically

- Headaches
- Chest or stomach pain
- Muscle tremors
- Difficulty breathing
- Elevated blood pressure

How you feel emotionally

- Depression
- Grief
- Guilt
- Anxiety or fear
- Feeling lost or overwhelmed

How you behave

- Excessive silence
- Social withdrawal
- Changes in sleep and eating habits
- Lower work performance

How to help yourself

Acknowledge the death and your reactions to it. Give yourself permission to feel badly without labeling yourself. Attend the funeral or memorial service. Take time to grieve.

- Get plenty of rest.
- Stick with everyday routines. Familiar habits can be very comforting.
- Eat well-balanced and regular meals, even if they don't seem appealing.
- Talk to someone who will listen and allow you to experience your feelings. If you don't feel like talking, just being with a companion can help ease your grief.
- Don't try to 'numb the pain' with drugs or alcohol.
- Realise that recurring thoughts and feelings associated with the death are normal. They'll decrease over time and become less painful.
- Remember it's OK to ask for help if you're having trouble coping. Contact your Emotional Wellbeing Solutions or a support group.

How to help your colleagues

Remember that, just like you, your co-workers are affected by the death. People experience grief differently. There is no right or wrong way to grieve.

Spend time with co-workers. Share feelings and check on how they're doing. Allow other people to talk about their feelings. Listen and respect their point of view, even if you don't share it.

Be aware that grief often makes people lash out with anger or other emotions. Don't take these emotional outbursts personally. Suggest available help, such as your Emotional Wellbeing Solutions or a support group. It may take longer for some people than others, but with time and acceptance the pain will lessen.

Your Emotional Wellbeing Solutions benefit offers you and your family confidential assistance to help you deal with a wide range of personal, health or work-related issues. This free service helps you manage stress, overcome anxiety or depression and cope with grief or loss. Our Emotional Wellbeing Specialists are available any time, every day.

There are a variety of resources available to yourself and loved ones at optumwellbeing.com

Our Critical Support Centre offers emotional support resources and information when you need it most. Find a variety of topic areas including mental health, traumatic events, natural disasters, grief and loss, supporting adolescents in crisis, and more.

Critical support when you need it

Visit optumwellbeing.com for additional critical support resources and information.

To access specific benefits information

visit livewell.optum.com and log in with your access code:

Call for support

[Client logo]

This programme should not be used for emergency or urgent care needs. In an emergency, call the local emergency services phone number or go to the nearest ambulatory or emergency room facility. This programme is not a substitute for a doctor's or professional's care. This programme and its components may not be available in all locations, and coverage exclusions and limitations may apply.

Optum® is a registered trademark of Optum, Inc. in the U.S. and other jurisdictions. All other brand or product names are trademarks or registered marks of the property of their respective owners. Because we are continuously improving our products and services, Optum reserves the right to change specifications without prior notice. Optum is an equal opportunity employer.

© 2024 Optum. All rights reserved. WF12062251 309906-102023 OHC