

Cultivating Emotional Resiliency Podcast

DR. DYLAN ROSS

On this podcast, Dr. Dylan Ross spoke to Dr. Rick Hanson. Dr. Hanson is a psychologist, senior fellow of UC Berkeley's Greater Good Science Center and New York Times bestselling author. They discussed cultivating emotional resiliency at the time of COVID-19 and focusing on ways to develop it. That includes using three inner strengths: grit, compassion and gratitude.

DR. RICK HANSON

Key Takeaways:

- Resilience helps us cope with life's challenges and contributes to our overall well-being. It is made from a variety of inner strengths. Three are grit, compassion and gratitude.
- Positive neuroplasticity is a way to gradually change your brain for the better. You can hardwire these three traits and build your resilience.
- To build these inner strengths, mindfully focus on specific experiences.

Grit:

- Grit is an irreducible sense of determination, moxie or scruffiness.
- Two qualities of grit are determination and strength.
- To build your grit, start with an experience. Think about a time you felt determined or strong. Then, stay with the experience. Feel it in your body for a few breaths. Focus on what feels good. This will help create a lasting physical change in your brain.

Compassion:

- Compassion is made up of two qualities: empathy for suffering and a desire to help.
- Having self-compassion is a major factor of resilience. But it is often more difficult than having compassion for others.
- To develop compassion, use the phrase “like me.” For example, “Like me, you worry about your kids.” In addition, use the phrase “like others.” For example, “Like others, I am stressed at this time.” This can create a sense of common humanity. It can make us more compassionate.

Gratitude:

- Gratitude is a simple feeling of thanks. It gives us hope and helps support the positive emotions that are a big part of resilience.
- To build your gratitude, take a moment every day to reflect on three things you’re thankful for. Or slow down for a breath each day to focus on feeling thankful.
- Building gratitude can help you feel better and become stronger. It can contribute to your emotional resilience.

This program should not be used for emergency or urgent care needs. In an emergency, call 911 if you are in the United States or the local emergency services phone number if you are outside the United States, or go to the nearest accident and emergency department. This program is not a substitute for a doctor's or professional's care. Due to the potential for a conflict of interest, legal consultation will not be provided on issues that may involve legal action against Optum or its affiliates, or any entity through which the caller is receiving these services directly or indirectly (e.g., employer or health plan). This program and all its components, in particular services to family members below the age of 16, may not be available in all locations and are subject to change without prior notice. Experience and/or educational levels of Employee Assistance Program resources may vary based on contract requirements or country regulatory requirements. Coverage exclusions and limitations may apply.

Optum® is a registered trademark of Optum, Inc. in the U.S. and other jurisdictions. All other brand or product names are trademarks or registered marks or the property of their respective owners. Optum is an equal opportunity employer.

© 2020 Optum, Inc. All rights reserved. WF998385 203789-072020